WARREN LELAND,

whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Florida, in the early days of emigration to Florida, he learned that one of the officers the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND's farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND's direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND's permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND's extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

MAUMEE JUSTICE.

As It Was Meted out by the Early Settlers.

Toledo Commercial Telegram: Subsequently after Perrysburg had been platted by the general government and the people who had settled at New Orleans, between Fort Meigs and the river, had moved up to the higher grounds of the forest village, a local government of a crude character was formed. Courts were far apart and the people could not afford to board prisoners, while the justices possessed little or no final jurisdiction in criminal cases. The people adopted a law unto themselves for the punishment of criminals of the lower grade. This class of offenders were required each to dig up a stump, or two or three stumps, from front street, according to the grade of the offense. The constable would attend the offender and see that the task was well performed. This worked well for every person then living up there knew every other person, and it was not a very pleasant thing for a man to be set at digging stumps out of the streets where every man, woman and child could see him and thus all become familiar with the fact that he was not a good citizen. Offenders, as a rule, keenly feel such public exposure, and the Perrysburg plan worked admirably.

There were grades of offense where stump digging was not deemed just the thing, and the accused were held for trial before the higher courts to receive the punishment due to their violations of law. On one occasion, where the offense was of the more aggravated character, the offender was taken from the jail one dark night, placed on the road to Fremont and told to travel. Men were stationed along the line of his march at brief intervals, provided with good whips. The parties who started the offender on his perilous journey gave him a good seed-off with "black snakes," and each sentinel in turn plied the lash with telling effect; the offender pleaded for mercy most piteously. The stage driver reported the next day that he met the fellow traveling hurriedly towards Fremont (then Lower Sandusky), and that his clothes were fairly cut into shreds. The sentinels with whips were stationed at brief intervals for a distance of a quarter of a mile or more, and the rascal did not dare to attempt escape from the punishment provided. The whippers were strong young men, and every stroke told. The man was not stopped, but each applied the gad vigorously as long as he was within reach. It is safe to assume that this offender did not return to the village, and probably he was cured of all disposition to offend against society in the future.

Another illustration of early justice was the case of a man who stole money. A German had lost $32 in silver and suspicion rested upon this man. He was arrested and taken before a justice of the peace. The office was in a building which had not been lathed or plastered, but the base boards were on. No money was found on the man, and no evidence could be produced of sufficient weight to hold him. This did not change public sentiment. The man was burning a coal pit in the southern part of the corporation, and one night a posse of self-constituted administrators of justice visited him. He denied all knowledge of the theft. This did not convince them. They placed a rope about his neck, drew him up to a limb, and let him down again. Still he denied, and still they would not be convinced. Again he was drawn up and held until it was difficult to restore him to life when lowered to the ground. He still persisted in his denial of all knowledge of the theft, but was told that unless he confessed and told where the money could be found the next time he was drawn up he would be left hanging to the limb—that if he would confess and restore the money he would not be molested for two weeks, they giving him that length of time to dispose of his charcoal and leave the country. He then confessed and said the money could be found behind the base-board in the justice's office—that he placed it there while under arrest. A portion of the posse remained guard over the man, while the balance went to see that his story was true. The money was found, taken to the Exchange hotel bar and placed in care of Mr. Crane, then bartender at that noted hotel, less the requisite amount for "treating" the crowd. The next day the German got his money less the "treating," and at the end of two weeks the thief had closed up his business and left. He was never seen in Perrysburg but once after that.

These methods of administering justice will appear singular to the people of to-day, but in those times the wheels of justice moved terribly slow in the courts throughout the northwest, and the means of keeping offenders were limited, while the people could not afford such expense, so they became a tribe unto themselves and dispensed justice in their own way. There is no evidence that they ever made a mistake.

Ten Minutes' Sermon to Children.

Did you ever notice the way in which a train of railroad cars is fastened together? At the end of each car is a bolt which slides in and out a little way, to which is hooked another bolt just like it on the next car. When the engine backs and the two cars come together, they do not strike with a hard bump, jolting the passengers out of their seats, but the two fastenings meet, each slides in a few inches, breaking the force of the blow, and the two cars come together easily and gently. These slides are called "buffers" because they "buff" each other and save the cars from many a hard bump. Now, do you know that everybody can carry with him a buffer, which will help him to avoid hard hits with other people. The buffer is kindness. A kind word, spoken gently even to an unkind one, a kind action, seeking the good of another above all, a kind full of love, will make all around us friendly and fill the world full of sunshine.

You remember how Joseph went out of his prison to become a prince. If he had moped and sulked in Potiphar's house as he had some reason for doing, or had sat down in prison cross and snappish, do you suppose that he would ever have risen to greatness? No, for all his ability, but for his kindness and cheerful, helpful spirit, you and I would never have heard of his name. More than one man since his time has found kindness useful in bringing him success.

Once a young man with very little money opened a small store in a New England city. So few people came to buy his goods that he became discouraged and said to himself, as he shut up his store on Friday night: "If I don't have more customers to-morrow I'll give it up and go away." Just then a little girl came along, looked up at him and said:

"You are the man that keeps this store?"

"Yes," he answered, "this is my store but it is shut and locked up now."

"Well," said the little girl, "won't you please open it again and sell me a spool of cotton? All the stores are shut up, and my mamma wants to finish my dress to-night so that I can go and visit my auntie to-morrow."

The young merchant could not refuse the child's pleading voice; so he unlocked the store went in, lit his lamp, found her the spool of thread and took her six cents. She went happy on her way home, and the next day her mother came in with two other ladies, thanked him for his kindness and bought some goods as did the other ladies also, who had heard the story. Perhaps they told it to others, for more customers came in, and from that day his store was successful. Afterward he became very rich and used to say, "I owe it all to that spool of cotton," but it was the kindness more than the cotton which won him friends and success; for who wouldn't rather buy of a kind, pleasant person than of one who seemed selfish and careless of others?—Christian Union.

Where They Were Born.

When Garfield was nominated there was much talk about Ohio being a great state to furnish Presidential timber, having already furnished two Presidents and having in reserve in case of emergency, several other gentlemen who felt not only perfectly competent but also willing to take the office with all that it would bring, either in the way of responsibility or salary. A glance at the biographies of the gentlemen who are now members of the United States Senate will also convince one that in furnishing brains for that body Ohio has certainly done all that could be asked of her. The gentlemen who have had the distinguished honor of having first seen the light in the Buckeye State are Voorhees and Harrison, of Indiana; Allison and Wilson, of Iowa; Plumb, of Kansas; and Pendleton and Sherman, of Ohio. Not so bad, is it? The Illinois men are as follows: John A. Logan, Dwight M. Sabin, of Minnesota, and James H. Slater, of Oregon. Indiana has but one representative, in the person of Senator John F. Miller, of San Francisco.

The Senators hailing from New York State are: Hill of Colorado; Conger, of Michigan; Van Wyck, of Nebraska; McPherson, of New Jersey; Miller and Lapham, of New York; Cameron, of Wisconsin, and Dolph, of Oregon. Kentucky, besides one of her own representatives, John S. Williams, who is a native of that State, has the following sons now in the United States Senate: Call, of Florida; Callum, of Illinois; Jonas and Gibson, of Louisiana; Vest, of Missouri; and Maxey, of Texas. Virginia, taking her as she stood when bearing the proud title of "Mother of Presidents," has besides her own representatives, Mahone and Riddberger, Farley, of California; Coke, of Texas, and Camden and Kennan, of West Virginia. The Senators of foreign birth are as follows: Senator Beck, of Kentucky, born in Scotland; John P. Jones, of Nevada, born in England. Those whose birth place was the "old sod" are Senators W. J. Sewell, of New Jersey; James G. Fair, of Nevada, and C. W. Jones, of Florida. Justin S. Morrill of Vermont, is the oldest man in the Senate, born in Stratford of that state, April 14, 1810. John E. Kennan, of West Virginia, is the youngest member, born Valenciennes, Va., in 1848. Lapham, of New York, was born in 1814; Dawes, of Massachusetts, in 1816; Saulsbury, of Delaware, in 1817; Conger, of Michigan, in 1818; Pike, of New Hampshire, in 1819 and Pugh, of Alabama, in 1820. These gentlemen, with Mr. Morrill, already mentioned, are the oldest men in the Senate.

Outdoor Life.

Man seems planned for an outdoor life in a mild climate, with just a leaf or two of shelter for a rainy day. His nature will bend for a time to the conventional burdens of an artificial civilization, but replant him on first principles in the outdoor garden of life and his recuperative forces will rebound with the elastic energy of steel springs relieved. Our fashionable friends would lose caste were they to use their neighbors' second hand clothing, but they will daily try to purify their own blood with their neighbors' second hand or even ten-times used breath, poisoned as it always is, even when inhaled by young and healthy persons. Man in common with other warm blooded creatures, generates a surplus of heat within his body. Outdoor sleepers find that no matter how cold the surrounding air may be, if dry, enough of the outflowing heat may be dammed back and retained by suitable clothing to sustain the vital functions in health and comfort. Until domestic art can supply our lungs with cool, first mortgaged air, in warm rooms, its retailers will have an important problem to solve. In the meantime outcampers and novel dwellers will wear the best aerated blood in the land.—American Home.
